CAESAR MORENO

THE LATE C. C. MORENO.

CAESAR CELSO MORENO, sometime Minister of Foreign Affairs under King Kalakaua, always a picturesque adventurer, is dead of a stroke of paralysis at Washington, where he has led a precarious life for the last ten years.

Moreno will be remembered here chiefly by reason of his brief and meteoric career as Minister of Foreign Affairs, in which office he endured four days, during which period he nearly precipitated a revolution and entirely succeeded in creating tremendous excitement.

Moreno came here in October, 1879, heralded as the promoter of a San Francisco-Hongkong cable and a line of steamers to the Orient. It was not long before he met and ingratiated himself into favor with King Kalakaua, to whom he acted as "adviser," as he himself put it. He won the entire confidence and admiration of the King by endorsing as sound wisdom all the royal views and theories of government. He encouraged the King to believe that a loan of $10,000,000 could be raised in China and helped him to plan how the money should be spent. He filled the King's mind with dreams of navies and forts and armies and power. He also convinced the King that Hawaii should be governed by Hawaiians; and he opposed the missionary influence. In fact, he did everything to make King Kalakaua believe that the royal ex-postoffice clerk was sufficient unto himself.

Finally, on August 14, 1880, King Kalakaua dissolved his then Cabinet and appointed another comprising Edward Bush, Minister of the Interior; Caesar Celso Moreno, Minister of Foreign Affairs; M. Kuaea, Minister of Finance; and W. C. Jones, Attorney General. This action, which popular opinion looked upon as unprecedented, unwarranted and inimical, caused great excitement and indignation. There were meetings and demonstrations by the people. The American and British Ministers declined to have anything to do with the new Minister of Foreign Affairs, who was considered to be disreputable and incapable.

After four days the King became alarmed at the situation and dismissed Moreno, although he still held him in favor, and secretly sent him abroad with a commission as Minister to the United States and every court in Europe. Moreno took with him three Hawaiian youths to be educated in Italian schools. One of these, Robert Wilcox, is the Delegate at Washington. Another, Robert Boyd, is living in Honolulu and active in Honolulu politics. The third, Booth, died abroad.

It was not only in Honolulu that Moreno experienced stirring adventures. He was in the Crimean war, incited the natives of Sumatra to revolt against Dutch rule, and it has always been persistently rumored, with no sound denial, that he was an officer with Nana Sahib at the time of the Cawnpore massacre.

Moreno achieved also some things of importance and good effect. He organized a Chinese steamship company and secured the passage of the Moreno fishery laws of California for the protection of the coast fisheries, while lobbying at Sacramento.

Moreno was well known by reputation, at least, to all who were in Honolulu at the time of his ministry, and he and his career are still remembered by them. Rev. Dr. S. E. Bishop was speaking of him yesterday:

"I did not know him personally," he said, "but his character was notorious about town. He was known as an adventurer, purely an adventurer. He came here originally with considerable prestige as a promoter of a proposed cable line from San Francisco to Hongkong. After six months he had entirely gained the confidence of King Kalakaua. At last King Kalakaua dissolved his old ministry and appointed Moreno prime minister and minister of foreign affairs. He stated that he was trying to rid himself of the missionary influence.

"The whole community, including the foreign consuls, rose against the new ministry. The flags were kept flying light and day, and the consuls would have nothing to do with Moreno. One day a man-of-war, British, I believe, came into port and refused to fire a salute to the King. Then the King began to be frightened and dismissed Moreno.

"Moreno departed on a secret mission for the time being as ambassador to European powers. He took with him some young men by the King's authority, to be located in European military and naval schools. Among them was 'Bob' Wilcox, now delegate at Washington.

"Moreno was an unscrupulous adventurer, of no character and no ability. He was looked upon by all respectable people as disreputable.

"He gained his influence over the King by flattery. He flattered him by making him think that he could create a fund of $10,000,000 by importing 1,000,000 Chinese and charging them $10 a head. The King had visionary schemes of establishing a navy and fortifications, and so forth. Moreno inflated his head with such ideas. The King published some tracts to support his extravagant notions.

"In personal appearance Moreno was a rather undersized man. I saw him two or three times that I remember. I understand he had a very plausible way with him. He has spent a great many years in Washington lobbying."

Prof. Wm. D. Alexander remembers Moreno and his career here as prime minister, but, like Mr. Bishop, did not know him personally.

"Some affair nearly stirred up a revolution," he said last night. "There were two public mass meetings to protest against the action of the King, and the appointment of the new minister. The most prominent members of the royal family also remonstrated."

"Moreno came here to establish a line of steamers with China. He tried to have it subsidized by the government, and finally succeeded in having a bill passed by the outlay of a great deal of money, but the money was never paid him. He also tried to have a bonus given him of $1,000,000 for a cable.

"He flattered King Kalakaua by telling him he could get money from China, which he said was the storehouse of the world. Money went there and never came back. He supported the King in all his pet projects, and told him that the country should be governed by Hawaiians.

"Some years ago, when asked why he had appointed Moreno, King Kalakaua said that he recognized in Moreno a man of ability; that Moreno agreed with him in his views of the government; that he said that the King should be his own prime minister, and that the country ought to be governed by Hawaiians.

"An amusing incident occurred in Naples when King Kalakaua was on his trip around the world, accompanied by W. N. Armstrong and C. H. Judd. Moreno came aboard the vessel at Naples, just as though he had the King in charge, and tried to take possession of him, ignoring his companions. But Armstrong was more than a match for him.

"Moreno was boastful and a braggart, as shown by his letters. He was not tactful."

Since 1882 or 1883 he has resided in Washington, D. C., where he has led a more or less uncertain existence as a lobbyist and newspaper correspondent. He was a native of Italy. He was about seventy years old.

Boni Will Fight.

PARIS, March 15.—The seconds of Count Boni de Castellane and M. de Rodays met today and decided that the duel is to take place tomorrow morning. Two shots will be exchanged at twenty-five paces. M. Perivier, one of M. de Rodays's seconds, who is co-manager of the Figaro, in an interview today, declared that the duel would be absolutely private. He said:

"I will not tolerate the presence of a stranger. If otherwise I will retire from the field. In my opinion it is improper to permit persons attracted by unhealthy curiosity to be present at a duel in which two men are staking their lives."

The first big event on the island. The committee in charge of the movement to bring the Olympian games to Chicago in 1904 has decided that the first step in that direction must be the raising of $100,000, which is half the estimated expense of the undertaking.

Tom Jenkins, the world's champion wrestler, has issued a challenge to wrestle any man in the world, naming especially Nourallah, Paul Pons, and Charles Wittmer. Jenkins will meet Rooney in Cleveland on the 26th inst. and later on will engage in a finish contest with Ernest Roeder.

RIOTING AT
ST. PETERSBURGThe Police Make Seven Hundred
Arrests and Kill One Student.

ST. PETERSBURG, Wednesday, March 13.—News comes from Moscow that the city is terribly excited over the riot which began there March 4 and continued several days. It is trustworthy reported that one student was killed and many were severely hurt in the conflict with the police, who arrested 700 persons besides noting the identity of many others. Some say 1,500 names were taken. It is stated that the demonstration was directed partially against Grand Duke Sergius, Governor General of Moscow, who celebrated his 50th annual official anniversary this afternoon. The students intended making demonstrations against their old enemy Suvorine, who celebrated the 25th anniversary of his assumption of the editorship and proprietorship of the Novoe Vremya this afternoon by holding a reception which was attended by the leaders of social life in the city, but the police were in the secret and displayed a strong force. The students assembled in considerable numbers, but departed peacefully.

W. C. Whitney denies the report that he offered $28,000 for Carry Hermann, the western colt.
